

Preparing for the Future of Learning

A NASS Leadership Lens

Quote:

“The future belongs to those who prepare for it today.” — Malcolm X

Narrative Reflection:

The future of learning is not a distant concept—it is unfolding now. Superintendents balance honoring proven practices with exploring approaches that reflect changing student needs and expectations.

Preparing for the future requires curiosity, flexibility, and a willingness to learn alongside others. Leaders who ask thoughtful questions, engage educators and communities, and remain grounded in purpose help systems adapt with intention rather than urgency.

The goal is not to chase trends, but to ensure learning remains meaningful, relevant, and student-centered.

Leadership Toolkit: Leading Toward the Future

- Encourage thoughtful innovation
- Center decisions on student experience
- Learn alongside educators and leaders

Reflection Prompt:

How is your system preparing students for what comes next?

Prepared for NASS by

Dr. Jill Gildea, Superintendent/CEO

 jillgildea0@gmail.com